

Abstract

A nanochannel structure with an oxide layer containing a surfactant micelle contains a functional molecule in a nanochannel. There is provided a new application as a functional material to a substance having a nanometer-sized pore by the technique on a hydrophobic site which is brought by the presence of the surfactant that is used during the production of the substance.